Discover how to make your farm or the farms in your community a lasting legacy at the upcoming Tennessee Farmland Legacy Conference. Farmers, landowners and community leaders will have the opportunity to learn about protecting and growing today’s farms for tomorrow’s families and communities.

This conference will bring together a diverse group of stakeholders for presentations on farm estate planning, profitability and timber management for landowners and planning techniques that protect farmland while not hindering economic growth for community leaders. Presenters will explain how communities and farmers can benefit from working together.

Tennessee’s Farmland Legacy

Friday, November 2, 8:30 am - 11 am

Century Farm Tour

The Sanders Spring Forrest Farm was established by John West in 1808. John and his wife Sarah, had eleven children. Their eldest child, Susan West, married John Sanders and he acquired the property in 1836. Ownership stayed with individuals within the Sanders Family until 1999 when ownership was transferred to the Sanders Family Partnership L.P. According to Angie Sanders Thompson “The family members that make up the Sanders Family Partnership plan to continue to operate and responsibly manage the farm raising livestock, timber, and hay for many generations to come.”

“If We Huff and Puff, Will We Blow Your House Down?”

In this upbeat, interactive session, we’ll take a look at the tools needed to build a strong family business. We’ll explore the influencers and work style preferences of different generations. Together, we’ll discover that when constructed correctly, not only do we have a solid, productive and profitable result, we also have laid the foundation for the legacy of a family business.
